the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (19.5% of the population).

There are a number of reasons why the number of people aged 65 and over has increased. One of the main reasons is that people are living longer. The life expectancy at birth in the UK is now 77 years for men and 81 years for women. This is a significant increase from the 1950s, when life expectancy at birth was 71 years for men and 75 years for women.

Another reason why the number of people aged 65 and over has increased is that people are having children later in life. This means that there are more people in the population who are aged 65 and over than there would be if people had children earlier in life.

There are a number of reasons why people are living longer. One of the main reasons is that people are eating healthier diets and exercising more. This has led to a decrease in the number of people who are obese and a decrease in the number of people who have heart disease and other chronic conditions.

Another reason why people are living longer is that they are taking better care of themselves. People are more likely to see their doctors and take their medicines as prescribed. They are also more likely to quit smoking and drink less alcohol.

There are a number of reasons why people are having children later in life. One of the main reasons is that people are waiting longer to get married. This means that there are more people who are aged 65 and over than there would be if people had children earlier in life.

Another reason why people are having children later in life is that they are having children with their partners. This means that there are more people in the population who are aged 65 and over than there would be if people had children with their partners.

There are a number of reasons why people are eating healthier diets and exercising more. One of the main reasons is that people are more health conscious. They are more likely to eat fruits and vegetables and less likely to eat fatty and sugary foods.

Another reason why people are eating healthier diets and exercising more is that they are more active. They are more likely to walk or jog and less likely to sit at a desk all day long.

There are a number of reasons why people are taking better care of themselves. One of the main reasons is that they are more health conscious. They are more likely to see their doctors and take their medicines as prescribed.

Another reason why people are taking better care of themselves is that they are more health conscious. They are more likely to quit smoking and drink less alcohol.

There are a number of reasons why people are waiting longer to get married. One of the main reasons is that people are waiting longer to find a partner. This means that there are more people who are aged 65 and over than there would be if people had children earlier in life.

Another reason why people are waiting longer to get married is that they are waiting longer to get a divorce. This means that there are more people who are aged 65 and over than there would be if people had children earlier in life.
